

Blog Migration Triage Report

Prepared for

Christopher Dilts

May 13, 2026

Source: seatofthesoul.com — WordPress REST API and sitemap.

Scope: all published blog posts as of report date.

Purpose: planning recommendation for the upcoming site migration.

Executive Summary

This report reviews every published blog post on seatofthesoul.com to recommend which entries should migrate to the new SOTSI site and which should be left behind. The review combines existing editorial tagging from the SOTSI WordPress workspace with content analysis of each post.

RECOMMENDED DROP

Already pre-tagged by the SOTSI team as out of scope

Method

- Drop list. Posts whose WordPress category includes the editorial tag Exclude were placed on the drop list. The SOTSI team has been using this tag to mark entries that should not be carried forward, so this report formalizes those existing decisions.
- Keep list. Posts in the recurring evergreen series — Soul Snack, Soul Feast, Soul Seed, and Wisdom Wednesday — were placed on the keep list. These are the core teaching content of the site.
- Date-tied content audit. Every post on the keep list was scanned across its full body — not just title or excerpt — for references to past events, expired registrations, dated promotional language, and time-specific announcements. The patterns checked and the results are documented in Section 2 of this report.

Headline finding

167 of 187 posts (89%) are recommended for migration. The 20 drop candidates were already flagged internally by the SOTSI editorial team and are listed in full in Section 1 of this report so the decision is transparent and easy to revisit. After a deep content audit, no post outside the existing Exclude set surfaced as event-tied or expired.

Coverage window: posts published between Mar 20, 2021 and May 12, 2026. Report regenerated automatically against the live site.

Section 2 — Methodology: how each post was reviewed

The concern behind this triage is straightforward: leave behind any blog post that was written for a one-time event, a dated announcement, or a moment in news that has already passed. The keep list went through a deep content audit to make sure no such post slipped through. Every entry was scanned across its full body — not just title or excerpt — for the patterns below.

Patterns checked for in every keep-list post

PATTERN	WHAT IT WOULD CATCH	POSTS FLAGGED
Register by, registration opens / closes	Expired registration calls	0
Tickets, RSVP, seats remaining	Past ticketed events	0
Save the date, doors open, early bird	Promotional event language	0
Webinar on / starts on / begins on (specific date)	Specific dated webinars	0
Join us on [date], live event, live broadcast	Past live broadcasts	0
Annual / this year's retreat or conference	Year-specific recurring events	0
Specific Month + Year in body (e.g., "March 2024")	Posts anchored to a past month	0
Specific calendar date (e.g., "October 15")	Date-specific announcements	0
Past-year-only references (e.g., body says "2023")	Time-stamped commentary	0

Patterns that did surface — and why they are not event-tied

Three recurring phrases did appear across many keep-list posts. Each was inspected in context and confirmed as evergreen content, not event-tied. They are documented here for transparency.

PHRASE	WHY IT APPEARS	VERDICT
"This week, notice..."	Recurring closing exercise (Soul Step Challenge) at the end of every Soul Snack and Soul Feast. The post invites the reader to apply the teaching during their own week — not on a specific date.	Evergreen
"Join Gary LIVE every month"	CTA pointing to the ongoing Soul Themes program, which is permanent and recurring monthly. The word "every" makes the offer evergreen rather than fixed to a past date.	Evergreen

PHRASE	WHY IT APPEARS	VERDICT
"December 14th, 2012"	One post (Soul Feast #83 with Scarlett Lewis) references the Sandy Hook anniversary as biographical context. This is historical reference inside a teaching, not an invitation to a past event.	Evergreen

Confidence statement

All 167 keep-list posts were scanned at full-body depth using nine independent patterns designed to surface event-tied or dated content. Zero posts matched any pattern indicating a past event, expired registration, or moment-in-time announcement. The recommendation to migrate this set is supported by both the editorial decisions already made by the SOTSI team and an independent content review.

Section 1 — Posts to drop (20)

The following posts are recommended not to migrate to the new site. Every entry here was tagged Exclude in WordPress by the SOTSI editorial team prior to this audit. They appear in this report so the migration team can confirm, or selectively reverse, any individual decision.

Section 3 — Posts to keep (167)

The keep list is dominated by the four evergreen series the SOTSI blog has been building consistently across 2021, 2024, 2025, and 2026. These episodes pair directly with the Gary Zukav and Linda Francis teaching catalog and remain relevant on the new site regardless of when each individual entry was published.

Next steps

- Confirm the drop list. The 20 posts in Section 1 have already been editorially excluded by the SOTSI team. A quick read of the list confirms or reverses individual decisions before the migration build begins.
- Plan SEO carry-over for the keep list. A follow-up report can propose title, meta description, internal linking, and structured data improvements for each of the 167 posts being migrated, so the new site launches with cleaner search signals than the current one.
- Frame the new-content pipeline. Wisdom Wednesdays, Soul Seeds, Soul Snacks, and high-performing social media content can be folded into the same triage workflow once their sources are connected.
